In order to provide websites that are easy to use, reliable and contain useful and relevant information; the SATC's websites use "cookies". Cookies are small amounts of information that may be placed on your device, such as a computer or mobile phone, in order to track your visit. Cookies help the SATC to remember who you are. The SATC uses cookies to help make your subsequent visits to its websites simpler and more seamless. For example, the SATC uses cookies to help deliver personalised website content and navigation to provide better user experiences. The SATC uses cookies to recognise whether you were a previous visitor to its websites, enabling it to load relevant and saved information.

The cookies on SATC websites do not store personal details such as your name, address, telephone number or payment information, but may include your IP address, referring site and pages visited on SATC websites. SATC analyses this data for certain trends and statistics, such as which parts of SATC websites users are visiting and for how long. SATC does not link your IP address to anything that identifies you.

You can set your browser to alert you to when you receive a cookie, giving you the chance to decide whether or not to accept it. However, by not accepting cookies, some web pages may not display properly or you may not be permitted to access certain information.

The SATC uses Analytics cookies to collect anonymous data, including but not limited to geographic location, time spent on its websites, how you reached the SATC's websites, what pages you visited and keywords you used to search the websites.

The SATC uses advertising cookies and technologies including Adobe, Facebook and Google for the purposes of analytics and online behavioural advertising. This enables the SATC and its partners to serve you with advertising content that is more relevant to your interests.
